03: Deficiencies in the service provided by competitors.

04: Product need.

05: High possibility of implementation.

Threats:

A1: Competition growth.

A2: Customer expectations.

A3 Companies with more experience.

A4: Entry of foreign companies with more advanced technologies worldwide.

A5: Macro economic factors.

2. Marketing. Promotion strategies (product sales channels). Rationale location of our company.

Marketing:

We will carry out a set of study techniques, such as research and surveys and interviews that will allow us to improve and achieve a great commercialization of our product.

Promotion strategies (product sales channels):

During the first year we will go out in search of our first potential clients. These are those businesses that are installed in the market with a consolidated company and having overcome the gap of the first 3 years. For the second year we will advertise on social media platforms such as LinkedIn and twitter. For the following years we hope to be recognized in the market for the quality of our products. This will help us to achieve a significant customer base, which will generate “word of mouth” advertising. Word of mouth advertising is about a group of people who talk about a product or service to make it known. This type of advertising is what we aim for since there is no better recommendation than that of satisfied customers with our work.

Rationale location of our company:

Our company has a place that will be our workplace. The company it's in 1546 Yí corner Paysandú. This location allows us to be in the computer marketing area and to compete with other companies and not go unnoticed by the public. A poor choice of location can condemn our ventures.
